The Belper School SEND (Special Educational Needs and Disabilities) Policy recognises that all school staff plays a role in the successful education of SEND students; the teachers – both subject and pastoral, the parent and student themselves. Belper School is an inclusive mainstream 11-18 secondary school and the Student Support Team caters for lots of aspects of student support, not just that required by special education needs.

Parents are encouraged to contact the school if they are concerned that their child may have special educational needs and the most appropriate member of the Student Support Team will respond.

What kinds of SEND does the school cater for?

The SEN Code of Practice 2014 defines SEN into 4 broad areas of need. These are:

- Communication and interaction needs
- Cognition and learning needs
- Sensory and physical needs
- Social, emotional and mental health needs

Belper School works with students whose needs fall into these categories and will support these students in their educational journey. We have specialist teachers, support staff and equipment to meet the needs of these students. However, as a mainstream school there are limitations to our ability to successfully support students with more complex educational needs. These students may benefit from the education support provided by a more specialist provision. We are happy to meet with you and discuss your child's special educational needs.

How does the school know if a student has SEN (Special Educational Needs)?

The Belper School SEND policy contains a definition of SEN and how disability can also hinder access to the school curriculum (SEN Code of Practice 2014).

Before entry, the school will use information from the student's Primary School to aid transition and inform teaching. The school will be made aware by the Primary School of all SEND students. Parents also have the opportunity at Open Evenings and Y6 Parent Evenings to speak to the school.

Once in school, the early identification of further students with SEND is a priority. The school will use appropriate screening and assessment tools, and ascertain student progress through:

- Evidence obtained by teacher observation/ assessments
- Screening and diagnostic tests (reading, spelling or more specialist tests)
- Reports and observations
- Information from parents
- National Curriculum results
- External exam results

The school sets itself high standards in relation to all students and not just SEND students. SEND aims of the school are for these students to have; as broad and balanced education as possible, appropriate involvement in decisions affecting their future provision, an appropriately differentiated curriculum and educational provision to allow this to be accessed with staff trained to meet their needs.

To this end the school trains its staff to promote their awareness and enhance their capacities in relation to a range of SEND (Special Educational Needs and Disabilities). This is carried out using INSET (In-service training) days and staff briefings. This is part of a programme that recognises that all staff teach students with SEND and require appropriate knowledge and resources to meet this demand.

What should a parent do if they believe their child has SEND?

Any parent's initial point of contact is their child's tutor. The concerns can be discussed with the tutor, who may then hand these concerns on to the Learning Support Department. A member of the Learning Support Department will liaise with the tutor and may well contact the parent for a further discussion.

How does the school know how well a student is progressing?

All students have their academic progress monitored at 3 points throughout the year. Academic faculties regularly review progress and adjust their teaching approach appropriately. Students on SEND intervention programmes linked to specific skills e.g. reading, spelling etc. are monitored by standardised tests every six months. These tests can measure relative progress in various skills e.g. spelling, reading accuracy and comprehension etc. All SEND students on specific interventions have a Learning Plan and this is updated as needs and/or provision changes

How will parents be made aware of their child's progress?

Parents of all students are made aware of their child's progress through termly reports, Tutor Review Day and Parents' Evenings. A large number of parents also access the school's information system (e-Portal) so that they can monitor their child's schooling on-line

Where a child is the focus of specific SEND intervention, for example:

- In-class support (either shared or individually) with a teaching assistant or post-16 helper working in conjunction with/under the direction of the class teacher
- Periods of withdrawal to work with a teaching assistant or post-16 helper on a 1:1 basis: as part of a very small group response to specific difficulties with a teaching assistant; as part of a small group response to specific difficulties, working with a teacher for a short period of time
- Periods of withdrawal to work with a specialist teacher as part of a small group or 1:1 response
- Periods of withdrawal to work with teaching assistant or post-16 helper on a 1:1 basis as a response to the student's specific difficulties.

The results of the interventions will be fed back to parents either as part of the school's reporting system, or by specific contact with the Learning Support personnel. There are two pre-planned opportunities for all parents to speak to teaching staff (Tutor Review Day and the Parents' Evening). Parents of students receiving SEND interventions may also be contacted directly by the SEND teacher as part of the review process

Students with a Statement of SEN or an EHC (Education and Health Care) Plan have a yearly meeting to evaluate the progress made according to the objectives outlined within the document and to plan ahead for the follow 12 months.

How does the school support students with SEND?

Belper School recognises that all teachers are teachers of SEND and recognise the importance of quality first teaching. Teachers work to remove barriers to learning through differentiation of lesson content and homework tasks. Teachers and TAs liaise regularly to discuss and share good practice.

Further to this a child may be taking part in a specific SEND intervention led by either a specialist teacher, teaching assistant or post-16 helper (under teacher supervision). The school may also allow the student to:

- use specific ICT hardware.
- access 'time-out' zones.
- attend specific intervention groups for literacy/numeracy
- attend peer support groups for specific social/emotional difficulties
- Access alternative curriculum if required, as co-ordinated and delivered by ACCESS, Learning Support or outside providers, e.g. colleges or work experience providers.

Further support may be provided by the involvement of an external support service/specialist teacher who (with the parents'/student's permission) will advise on the student's education. External support services may provide specialist input to support the student's education.

The whole aim of this process is to 'level the playing field' for these students and reduce the barrier to learning; whether it is the use of specialist teachers, equipment, curriculum, external agencies or a blend of all of these. At all stages student progress is monitored so that an evaluation of the impact of the provision can be made and fed into the review cycle for the student.

Teaching staff are made aware of the individual needs of students and this information is held centrally so that all teaching staff can access this. Using this information teaching staff can adapt their teaching material, teaching approach and delivery to match the student's needs.

As students progress through the school, the Year 9 Options process offers them the opportunity to make choices around their areas of interest. Some SEND students are offered the opportunity to use the Learning Support/Access Areas as an option choice to support their learning in other subjects. This choice is only offered by invitation and is not available to all students.

For students who access external exams, the JCQ (Joint Qualifications Council) Guidelines relating to Access Arrangements are followed and applied, so that students are not disadvantaged in relation to their ability to access the assessment process and demonstrate their abilities. To this end the school has specifically trained a member of staff to be able to assess and administer this process

How is the decision made about how the student is supported?

Teaching SEND students is a whole-school responsibility. The core of the teachers' work involves a continuous cycle of planning, teaching, and assessing and setting appropriate targets, taking into account the differences in students' abilities, aptitudes, and interests. Assessment is the process by which students with SEND can be identified. Whether or not a student is making adequate progress is seen as a significant factor in considering the need for SEND provision. Some students may need increased levels of provision and support.

The SEN Code of Practice (2014) advocates a graduated response to meeting students' needs.

SEN intervention is characterized by interventions that are different from, or additional to, the normal differentiated curriculum. SEND intervention can be triggered through concern, supplemented by evidence that, despite receiving differentiated teaching, students:

- make little or no academic progress where such progress would be expected from previous assessments, despite a differentiated curriculum
- demonstrate difficulty in developing literacy or numeracy skills
- show persistent emotional/behavioural difficulties which are not affected by behaviour management strategies and maybe the result of an underlying learning need
- have sensory/physical problems, and make little educational progress despite the level of accommodation within the classroom
- experience communication and/or interaction problems and make little or no progress despite experiencing a differentiated curriculum

If the school decides, after consultation with parents, that a student requires additional support to make progress, the Learning Support and or Access Department, in collaboration with subject teachers, will support the further assessment of the student and have an input in planning future support. The subject teacher will remain responsible for planning and delivering subject based curriculum.

The impact of the support on the student will be monitored and evaluated. The aim of the support is to meet the student's need and not be a set amount of money/time. It is the impact and not the input that is the most important part of the process. The impact of the support is measured against the student's progress towards their academic targets. These targets may be generated by KS2 information, teacher assessment or against school administered standardised tests.

How SEND students are appropriately included on school trips

All students are entitled to be included in all aspects of the school community and we aim for all students to be included in school trips and out of school hours learning opportunities.

A risk assessment is carried out prior to any off-site activity to ensure that health and safety will not be compromised. We will make every effort to make reasonable adjustments to enable a student to participate, but in the unlikely event that it is considered unsafe for a student to take part in an activity, then alternative relevant activities will be provided in school.

What support is there for students' wellbeing?

The tutor is at the heart of the school's pastoral system and day to day contact with students enables the tutor to gain an overall view of the students' wellbeing. The Learning Support and Access areas can each provide a quiet space for students who struggle with social situations and they are open before school, at break and during lunchtimes. The Learning Support Department also runs the Positive Support programme for emotionally vulnerable students and in Year 7 there is a specific Nurture Group provision one afternoon per week for students vulnerable during the primary/secondary transition. The Access Area provides emotional support via their TAs who will be 'key workers' to vulnerable students.

At any given time the school has a small number of trainee therapists from Derby University's MSc programme in Integrative therapy. These therapists can provide input for students with emotional issues, but these places are limited

Procedures are in place to support students with medical needs and the school follows Derbyshire County Council policy regarding the administrations of medications. Parents should contact the School Office should they have any concerns.

What specialist external agencies are accessed by the school?

The SENCO liaises with a range of specialist services to ensure provision for students is appropriate and meets their needs. These include:

- Health – GPs, school nurse, clinical psychologist and psychiatrists (CAMHS – Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services), paediatricians
- Speech and language therapists, occupational therapists, physiotherapists
- Social Care services – multi-agency teams (MAT), social workers, child protection teams
- Derbyshire Educational Psychology Service
- Derbyshire Careers Service
- Derbyshire specialist teacher advisors – Visual Impairment, Hearing Impairment, Physical Impairment, Autism Outreach and Behaviour Support teachers
- Derbyshire Lead SEND Officer for Amber Valley.

What training have the Learning Support Department had?

All teachers within the Learning Support Department are qualified SEND specialist teachers – with specialisms in Dyslexia, ASD and other aspects of SEND. A member of the teaching staff holds a qualification formally recognised by the Joint Council for Qualifications (JCQ) and can assess students for the relevant access arrangements available in a formal exam situation.

All our Teaching Assistants are qualified to Level 3 (A level equivalent) or higher in various areas of SEN, similar to the SEN specialist teachers. A small number are qualified to postgraduate level in relevant disciplines.

The Inclusion Department (Access) is run by a highly trained behaviour specialist. She has trained her staff up in all areas relevant to the demands of this type of provision e.g. use of emotional profiling, restorative justice and attachment theory. Some Teaching Assistants within this area are also qualified to Level 3 and beyond in relevant areas.

How accessible is the school?

The school is fully adapted for physically disabled students to be able to access the school site and relevant curriculum areas. The school's Accessibility Plan (available on the school website) contains the relevant details relating to this. Students with hearing, visual and physical impairments are present in the school population and within the resources available to the school we will follow the guidance of the Local Authority Outreach Teachers in order to promote the full inclusion of these students.

The school actively seeks to promote the equality of SEND students. The school website contains the school's Equality Objectives where disabled students are explicitly mentioned as one of the targeted groups to be monitored for achievement and ability to make a positive contribution to the school. The school's Single Equality Plan (available on the website) reinforces this as a school aim and details how the curriculum is able to support this.

The school's Accessibility Plan outlines the aims of the school to actively promote the inclusion of all disabled students and how we constantly seek to improve this.

How does the school's admission process work in relation to SEND students?

The school's Admission Policy outlines these arrangements. The school works within the Local Authority Admissions Policy (available from Derbyshire County Council) where there is recognition of the student's right to an inclusive education. This places 'in catchment' students who are Children in Care or have an EHC Plan as priority 1 and 2 for admission.

How do parents get information about external additional support on offer?

Derbyshire LA publishes a Local Offer on their website www.derbyshire.gov.uk. Information on all the support on offer is available here.

How can a parent make a complaint?

Any complaints are dealt with as part of the school's complaints procedure. The school's Single Equality Plan explicitly mentions disabled students as a group for whom data is collected and held in relation to student achievement and any discriminatory behaviour observed.

For more detailed information please consult the school's SEND Policy which is available on the school website
